HE CAUGHT THEM WITH THE GOODS

Three Small Negro Boys Arrested on Charge of Robbing Man's Home.

Three little negroes were lined up in a trembling row before the desk sergeant of the Second Police Station last night on the charge of entering a home on North Seventh Street on a stealing expedition. They were part of a gang of five, all under twelve years, who were caught as they fled down Seventh Street by Officers Crafton and Dubuque and the injured householder, Mardiras Darhanian, of 310 North Seventh Street.

Darhanian accompanied the boys—Charlie Wiggins, twelve years old; Eddie Orange, ten years old, and Lou Dockstader Brackett, seven years old—to the station house and had Magistrate Purdie write warrants, holding them on felony charges. The police have the names of the other two who formed part of the gang and will arrest them to-day. While he had not had time to take an inventory of the pillaged rooms, Darhanian declared that his wife had been robbed of a silver watch, and he believed other valuables to be missing. The watch and other property seemed to have been carried away by the pair that escaped capture, as nothing was found on the three boys arrested.

A New Shoe Firm

Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss Rosa Harris and Mr. Ellis Miller, formerly with Hoffheimer, so well and favorably known in the shoe business, are now interested in the Specialty Shoe Store, 219 East Broad Street, where they will be glad to see their friends and the public generally.

DEMAND FURTHER OYSTER HEARING

were any germs or microbes coming down the river, as the Bureau of Chemistry claims, they would appear in the tests of these oysters, and he told his fellow conferees, that fact would also be evidenced by ten dead men in the crew of his vessel, the Governor Philip P. Thomas, all of whom had been partaking of these oysters for some time.

The Maryland and Virginia men are of the opinion that the national government or the District should do something toward providing a sewage filtration plant for the city of Washington, such as Baltimore is about to establish, to forever do away with the question of what effect the sewage of Washington is having on the oysters of the Potomac.

Dr. Dent, who has been a practicing physician in St. Mary's County, Md., and the surrounding section for twenty-three years, told the conference that he and his fellow practitioners in St. Mary's County regarded the oysters criticized by the Bureau of Chemistry as being perfectly safe.

years, and that he rarely sees or hears of the bacillus coli, of which eaters of oysters from the Potomac are warned by the Bureau of Chemistry. Representatives of the oyster packers of the South Atlantic and Gulf States will meet in conference at the Raleigh Hotel to-morrow at noon, upon the invitation of a number of Baltimore packers and representatives of can manufacturing concerns.

At this conference, which will be attended by about twenty-five members of the packing and can manufacturing industry, questions of general interest to the oyster trade will be discussed, including the recent report of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Agricultural Department that there has been pollution among oysters in the Potomac River.

Tuberculosis Society May Relieve City of Consumptives Now at City Home.

Segregation of tubercular patients now at the City Home Hospital by an arrangement with the Tuberculosis Camp Society was informally discussed last night by a subcommittee of the Council Committee on Relief of the Poor, together with committees from the Pine Camp Association and the visiting staff of the City Home Hospital.

It was agreed that the removal of consumptives was imperative whatever may be the outcome of the pending movement for erection of a general city hospital. In regard to that issue the committee asked leave to employ an architect for expert advice in compiling estimates of the comparative cost and advantages of accepting the Memorial Hospital offer and enlarging that building, and erecting a new city hospital for both white and colored patients. And permanent plan of improvement at the City Home was declared to be inadvisable, the maintenance of a hospital there being a mere makeshift until something better can be provided.

Edmund Strudwick, president, and Fred W. Scott, treasurer of the Tuberculosis Camp Society, told of the founding of Pine Camp on property belonging to the city, the expenditure in building and equipment of about $17,000, and the maintenance, about one-third by contributions and two-thirds by city aid. The camp now has accommodations for thirty-four patients, all white. To meet the city on a proposition for removal of all tubercular patients from the City Home an enlargement would be necessary, it was stated, and it would also be necessary to erect a complete plant for the care of colored patients. The committee was of opinion that the erection of tubercular pavilions at the City Home was impracticable, and Messrs. Strudwick and Scott agreed to consult their board of directors and make some concrete proposition looking to a partnership between the city and the Tuberculosis Camp Society for the care of the indigent consumptives of the city, the white and colored, thus to a large extent simplifying the proposition of providing a general hospital for surgical and noncontagious cases.

DEALERS PUT HIGH TAX ON HALF-PINT MILK BOTTLES

Product in Quarts and Pint Sizes Stands the Same, but Hip-Pocket Variety is Shoved Up to Three Cents Each.

The recent heavy demand for milk in half-pint bottles, which all but threatened the life of the pint and quart bottles, has driven one of the city's largest dairies to return to the old custom of charging more in proportion for milk in half-pints than in quarts. So that now the estimable housewife who found it more convenient to handle the "white wine" in half-pints will pay 3 cents per quart instead of 10 in the smaller bottles.

While there has been no agreement among the city dairymen in regard to the duty which is charged for the dainty half-pint, all have realized for some time that a move must be made to break up the mad scramble for hip-pocket varieties.

"For," said a prominent dairyman yesterday, "doesn't it cost me just as much to handle a half-pint as a quart? The expense to this dairy of bottling, sealing and delivering a half-pint of milk is just the same as it is for a quart. And I don't sell enough milk in a half-pint bottle to more than pay for the cost of handling. Something had to be done, and the only way we could put a crimp into this growing habit of buying the family milk supply in half-pint bottles was to boost the price on the smaller sizes."

Madame will continue to purchase her quart of milk as of yore at 10 cents a quart, be it understood, when she buys the quart in a quart bottle, or she may obtain the same quantity at the same price even if she insists on having the quart delivered in two pint bottles. But if she holds out for the half-pint sizes she may expect hubby to gasp when he lumps the milk bill and say: "Dear, the robbers. Think when I was a boy on the farm, etc., etc." So, madame, if you have heard this story of papa on the farm before and its pristine freshness has begun to pall, avoid the half-pint as you would have your hubby avoid the half-pint of condensed corn.

Now, since one big dairy has taken the decisive plunge and raised the openers on the half-pint bottles, a mad scramble on the part of the smaller dealers—who have been the worst sufferers—to get into the bandwagon may be expected. Farewell petite, convenient, enticing half-pint. Another blow has been struck the U. S. Con. But, after all, it has been the milkman who has been milked ever since the housewives caught the half-pint fever, and with one accord the dairymen of Richmond rise on their milk cans and shout: "We're tired of being stung."

Several years ago, when the half-pint bottle was first introduced—that is, introduced into the milk trade—the dealers placed a premium on its sale because of the relatively high cost of handling. Recently this tariff was removed and milk sold in half-pints at the same proportionate rate as in quarts, with the result that the whole milk trade of the city seemed on the verge of flowing into the half-pint size. Now the tariff has been restored and the dealers are sitting back waiting the howls and falling off in orders for "my quart in half-pint bottles, please."

ANGEL GOES TO JAIL

Failed to Give Bond for Failure to Support His Wife.
C. P. Angel, the ex-policeman arrested on complaint of his wife on the charges of desertion and failing to provide for her and his four young children, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday morning. He was ordered by Justice Crutchfield to pay his family $20 monthly for the next year. In default of giving bond to carry out this order the former officer was committed to jail. Angel was captured in Roanoke several days ago and brought back here by Detective-Sergeant Kellam.

A little goes a long ways and every bit counts.
